QUIT CALOMEL!

A Safe Vegetable Substitute Is Olive Tablets For the Liver.

Thousands are Turning From This Dangerous Drug.

Dr. P. M. Edwards, a prominent physician of Portsmouth, Ohio, has discovered a new laxative and liver tonic in a combination of vegetable materials, mixed with olive oil, which is in effect almost exactly like the old and untrustworthy calomel, except that there are none of the bad after effects of calomel.

Dr. Edwards has long been a foe of calomel, though he recognized its value along with its dangers. His distrust of the uncertain drug eventually started him years ago towards experiments with the view of discovering a substitute, and he is today in possession of the long-sought-for combination, which is in the shape of a little sugar coated, olive-oil colored tablet.

The results of fifteen years' experience and practice are embodied in these marvelous Olive Tablets. They are called Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, and their effect on the liver has been the means of relief to many of Dr. Edwards' regular patients, as well as to thousands of others who have suffered and were afraid of calomel.

They are gentle in their action, yet always effective. They bring about that remembrance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of harmful impurities.

"These little Olive Tablets has a movement all its own." 16c and 25c per box. The Olive Tablet Company, Columbus, Ohio. Dr. P. M. Edwards, President.

Patriotism

The stomach is a larger factor in "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" than most people are aware. Patriotism can withstand hunger but not dyspepsia. The confirmed dyspeptic "is fit for treason, stratagems and spoils." The man who goes to the front for his country with a weak stomach will be a weak soldier and a fault finder.

WEDNESDAY EVE'G, JUNE 12, 1912.

Treason!
"Treason!" shouts Colonel Roosevelt. The particular brand of treason the Colonel complains about is the decision of the Republican National Committee to seat the Taft delegates from Indiana, yet save in a single instance that action of the committee was unanimous.

Perhaps the Colonel means that the Roosevelt members of the committee are traitors because they have not voted to uphold the unworthy contests of would-be Roosevelt delegates. If so, the public will acquit the Roosevelt members of the charge of treason.

T. Roosevelt once declared that under no circumstances would he run a third time for President. Subsequently, he consented to be a receptive candidate. His opponent, however, showed a disposition to run away with the nomination, whereupon the Receptive Candidate became the Aggressive Candidate. Dignity was cast to the winds and the Rough Rider rustled over the country less in hand bounding up the voters and shouting loud notes of hoarse defiance at the enemy.

He is still shouting; in fact, his roar reverberates through the columns of the press continuously. The burden of his song just now is fraud; the fraud practiced not upon himself, but upon the People. Like another great statesman and orator, the Colonel's voice is always for the People, but, regrettably, it has been observed that the interests of the Colonel and the People are the same.

The Republican National Committee, judging from the attitude of the Roosevelt members alone, seems to be doing pretty nearly the right thing. That being the case, its verdict will have the popular approval, and any attempt to override it by interference of violence or violent demonstrations will fail.

If this be treason make the most of it.

It is better to look the safe at night whether it contains anything of intrinsic value or not. Few business men keep much money in their safes; as a matter of fact, they keep as little as possible. These safes are intended primarily for the safekeeping of their books and papers, and particularly for the purpose of guarding them from the danger of fire. Hence we find that the business man's safe is fireproof rather than burglarproof; but, if the doors are left unlocked at night, the safe will be safe against neither.

The Democratic candidate for President have resolved themselves into a Ways and Means Committee to prevent the Peerless One from stampeding the Baltimore Convention. It is suspected that they are not acting hastily in this matter.

The two bills have some enthusiastic admirers who follow them from town to town taking toll from the people. The pickpockets and swindlers who accompany the "circus" cannot add much to its immediate prosperity, and they unquestionably add to its evil reputation. A good name is worth good dollars, and a good circus should seriously discourage criminal followers.

"Don't give up the ship!" seems to be the battle cry at Chicago.

Collector Norton has settled up his 1911 school duplicate; and he didn't give the business his undivided attention, either. The Courier has always contended that our tax duplicates can be collected within the year if the people get the habit of paying their taxes within that period, and they can only learn the habit by having an active collector as a teacher.

The combination of the boy and the dynamite cup has been the cause of countless injuries to the boy, yet boys are still allowed to have these implements of destruction, and to wound, maim and kill themselves with them. When will parents and adults learn to keep dynamite cups out of the reach of boys?

Trotter is something of a Sport Center. It must be the atmosphere of the place. Conneltsville's first race track was in the immediate vicinity, just at the top of Limestone Hill.

Fayette county's boy homicide has been sent to Morgantown. Will Morgantown cure a murderous temper?

The Auditor General used the ax on Washington county's primary election bill and in explanation said that the primaries there cost more than in any other county of the State. Cuthbert county had better rise and explain; is it merely corrupt or is it downright Progressive?

When we bought Alaska from Russia we didn't pay anything extra for the coals and the Alaskans could just now gladly give them all back to Russia.

Louisiana is flood-swept by the Father of Waters and Alaska is smoke-enveloped and dust-strewn by volcanic eruptions. This is a great country. It is burned with fire in one end and covered with water in another.

Danger overtakes us when we least expect it. One of the survivors of the Titanic was crushed by a polo pony a few days ago, and on Monday day night a veteran miner was run over and killed by the trolley car near Lebanon.

The Conneltsville school teachers have been elected and assigned, and the taxes have been levied and a collector appointed to gather them. Everything is ready for another successful school year. Failure never follows upon the footsteps of the forehand.

It is proposed in the Somerset county courts to change the township line to permit one Whitelaw (Redd) Schuler to vote in Milford township instead of Somerset township. Whitelaw must have a pull via Milford.

JULIUS CAESAR

By Isaac of Yukon.

Julius Caesar was related by blood to the great Roman general Marius, and by marriage to Cato, another great warrior. When eighteen years of age Julius was married with awful violence. He had a great man of that day, became jealous and commanded him to get a divorce. As the train fare to Reno was a little steep at that time, Caesar refused, and being also, beat it into the Sabine mountains. A reward of thirteen dollars and eighty cents was offered to the man who would make Caesar turn up his nose. When this reward was posted, a general rush ensued for the Sabine mountains, and for a time Rome was so deserted that several moving pictures theatres had to close business. But Caesar had some accounts running in the Sabine mountains, and he went to his home town, where he stayed until Sulla cashed his chips. Caesar came home soon after the death of Sulla and was elected to the consulship in the year 49 B. C. After serving for some time he was offered the governorship of Cisalpine Gaul (Italy) for a term of five years. Caesar accepted the offer, and trooped out of Rome with about five legions of soldiers as a body guard. With these men he fought like a wild cat, conquering all his opponents inside the far round limit. Consequently, when Caesar returned home again he challenged the world to a forty-five round bout; gave each of his soldiers 300 apiece, and sent every citizen of Rome a check for $12. This pleased the people very much and for some weeks the saloons were open twenty-four hours every day. Nevertheless, Julius was not content, so he left for Spain, where he had several stiff arguments, but at length he subdued that country and journeyed with his army to Brundisium. After taking a drink at this place he went on to Pharsalia, where he defeated a political enemy, Pompey, in an pitched battle. After the battle, Pompey fled to Ptolemy in Egypt with 2,000 men.

Soon after his arrival Pompey was invited to take a boat ride with the king. He accepted, but had hardly seated himself in the boat when his head came in violent contact with a war club, and he is supposed to have Pompey died with his shoes on. After assuming himself all over Europe Caesar left for Rome after the battle of Thapsus. He was just enjoying his exalted position as Emperor of Rome, when some friends who were under deep obligations to him, stabbed him to death before the statue of Pompey. Thus the life of one of Rome's greatest men was sacrificed because he was too good to live.

THE ROOT OF THE TROUBLE

Buffalo Bill Sued.

Suit for $133 was brought in Union town against the Buffalo bill show by Patrick and John Ryan. Breach of contract in not showing on the Reagans lot is alleged. The plaintiff wants $110, the rest charged 2 1/2% fee, and $23 for damages to the Lafayette Hotel. Bills were posted on the Lafayette with the order standing the show would be held on the Reagans lot.

Resolutions of Respect.

James H. Haggard, host of the Chamber of Commerce, of the city, and one of the most valued capable and reliable citizens, was possessed of those sterling qualities which differentiate men of worth and achievement from those of mean and prosaic. He was a man of high character and high ability, and his death is a great loss to the community. He was a man of high character and high ability, and his death is a great loss to the community. He was a man of high character and high ability, and his death is a great loss to the community.

As an earnest and sincere, though by no means adequate, measure of the Chamber's appreciation of the life services, character and attainments of a man of public of the deeds he wrought, and in highest respect admiration and regard for his memory, the Chamber, through its committee, has decided to erect a monument to his memory. The monument will be erected on the site of the Chamber, this sixth day of June, A. D. 1912.

MILLIONS SPENT BY STEEL CORPORATION TO BENEFIT LABOR

Solicitor Bolling Outlines Work Being Done by Big Concern.

ACCIDENTS GREATLY REDUCED

Advanced Policy Has Resulted in Situation Where Damage Suits are Seldom Brought by Employees—Fortune Spent in Just Making Start.

Interesting information concerning the work of the United States Steel Corporation in rendering labor safe in mines and mills, and providing better conditions for workers, both in the discharge of their duties and at their homes, was outlined at the banquet of the American Iron & Steel Institute in New York by Henry C. Bolling, solicitor of the United States Steel Corporation. Mr. Bolling said in part:

"The accident relief for men injured and the cost of the company, which is paid in all cases regardless of legal liability and without the necessity even of application on the part of the injured man or his family, is costing each year, approximately $2,500,000.

"The accident prevention, in which I think we may claim to have an effective system as exists in the United States and probably abroad, costs $750,000 per annum.

"Sanitation and welfare work in which we have only made a good start, costs already $1,250,000 annually.

"The pension fund, providing for superannuated employees, costs, for the annual payments and for the payments necessary to establish the permanent fund, $700,000 per annum.

"This is a total of $7,250,000 annually, which, with the items not specified, will easily reach an expenditure of $7,000,000 a year for improving conditions among workers of the U. S. Steel Corporation.

"It is just about six years since the Corporation sought to organize excellent work which the accident compensation had been doing previously in accident prevention. In these six years we have established a system of accident prevention which an entirely disinterested and somewhat critical observer would have made the South Works of the Illinois Steel Company the safest steel works in the world. I think I may add, in confidence, that one of the investigators of the United States Government told me that the accident prevention of the Steel Corporation is today more effective than that of the Illinois and Germany has been our model for many years.

"The results in figures show that in six years the number of fatal and fatal accidents has been a reduction of 15 per cent, which, when added to the means of saving from injury, means the saving of approximately 2,000 men each year. That work costs something. It has not cost it was stated about two and a half millions of dollars, but the interesting figure of the other side is that the saving has been about $1,000,000.

"The rate of accidents in 1908 and assuming as I think we may fairly assume, that if this work had not been done the rate of accidents in 1911 would be as high as that of 1908, the saving each year of 2,000 men from serious or fatal injury, the money saving amounts to about $1,450,000. And over the period during which we have spent that two and a half million dollars in equipping mills with safety devices, the aggregate money saving in money which would have had to be applied to the maintenance of common decency to the relief of men injured and the families of men killed, has been $1,750,000, so that I think the accident relief has to be credited something like $1,000,000.

"The accident relief has been always classed as secondary to accident prevention. It is called, in the language of the present statutes, workers' compensation. We do not call it that, because we do not believe there is any compensation for a man who has lost an arm, or a leg, or a hand, or a foot. But we do the best we can for him regardless of whether the State laws demand it and long before any of the State laws did demand it, every man employed by the Steel Corporation was able to tell in advance just exactly what provision would be made for him or for his family in the event of accident, injury, or death. The best proof of what the men think about our accident relief is that, notwithstanding the pressure under which they are put by ambulance chasers—overhauling the fact that most of the men in the plant have been the long established custom in this country—last year 82% of our men accepted the accident relief plan, and of the total number of injured men, suit was brought by only two-thirds of 1%.

"On this showing, I think we can claim that the men are satisfied. The cost per employee of total expenditures in the casualty department was about $11 per annum.

"Another item which shows a great change in that work is the proportion of the expenditure arising from accidents which goes directly to the injured men or their families. Investigations made by the New York commission showed that under the old system, under the system of insurance to employees' liability companies, anywhere from 30 to 100% of the amount paid by the employer actually reached the injured man or his family. Our record for last year shows that of the money we spent 72% went directly to the injured men and their families.

"One of the interesting items in the growth of this accident work and the spread of it over the world is the present movement to establish by corporation a uniform danger plan, which a gentleman representing us at the congress to be held this summer in Europe will present to

Try This For Your Nerves

Thousands of weak, nervous, run down men and women have found Wade's Golden Nervine to be the ability, neurasthenia, weak heart, insomnia, lack of energy and vitality, and all the conditions of the system due to impoverished nerve strength. This product is different from anything you have ever used. It contains no alcohol, morphine, opium, or any other narcotic whatever. It soothes and quiets the unstrung nerves, tones the weakened vital organs, and gives that much desired healthful stimulation, without any objectionable ingredients. It is a medical product of the highest class.

All druggists now sell Wade's Golden Nervine at $1. If you will not get it for you promptly, it will be mailed to any address on request, by J. M. Wade, Co., St. Louis, Mo. If you feel depressed, despondent, half-sick, and lack strength and vitality a few doses of this tonic will make you feel like new. There is positively nothing to equal it. Wade's Golden Nervine is a real food for starved nerves, and a general nourishing tonic for the system.

The first dose shows improvement. There is nothing made which gives such prompt and permanent results. Sold by druggists everywhere and in this city by Graham & Co.

that congress. If the movement succeeds, this time will not be all over the world, whether in Finland, in Armenia, in Bulgaria, in Pittsburgh or in South Chicago, one sign, without any lettering, will mean "Danger!" and the amount of education necessary to teach the forlorn when he is likely to be hurt will be increased.

"Another thing which has made a great difference in the condition of the employees in the Steel Corporation is the extension to all its employees of the pension system which has been made possible through the decision on the part of the Corporation to add $5,000,000 to the $1,000,000 originally contributed by Mr. Carnegie. Out of this fund every man and woman who has served the Corporation for 20 years is assured an income sufficient to keep him or her out of his or her life after superannuation. Already 1,500 of these superannuated employees are being taken care of for the rest of their lives.

"Perhaps the most complex of all these things is the question of safety. It does not permit of the same ready standardization which can be applied to matters of safety. The proper guard for a punch is probably the same in Waukegan as it is in Pittsburgh, but the proper thing to be done in one of Mr. Crawford's mining camps would be entirely too paternal and too much of an interference with the independence of the workers in Pittsburgh.

The problems of sanitation admit of a little more standardization, perhaps a little more. The problems of welfare are much more complex and depend a great deal more upon the size and the situation of the community and the character of the workers. The committee on sanitation is working now and has some very low and established in all the companies the standard of sanitation maintained in the best plants. All the work of each company is being made familiar to every other company. And if any man has a problem in sanitation or in safety at any plant, he may find all over the country are put at his disposal, showing the results of anything of a similar kind attempted elsewhere.

"It might interest you to know some of the items which appeared on the budget of last year for sanitation and welfare. One I notice was the provision for pure water, the installation in one of the plants of the National Tube Company having cost $100,000. Another of these problems is sanitary disposal of sewage, in which the Erie Pipe Company spent last year from $100,000 to $150,000. Drainage of stagnant water has become another source of concern. The enforcement of cleanliness and order, fencing, painting, cutting weeds and collecting garbage, are some of the things that have come under the consideration even of the President of the subsidiary companies. Wherever any of the companies are responsible for the food supplies of the community, care has been given—better care than is given in many of the city markets—to the preservation of order and the most approved plans of sanitation.

In a number of the companies—in fact, quite generally has this been done—they have installed shower baths and lockers. There is one swimming pool, or perhaps two, and I have the gratification of Mr. Farrell's assurance that he personally wishes to see a great many more of them.

"At one of the plants of the American Bridge Company they have tried a very interesting experiment by devoting a certain amount of unused land to the use of employees for vegetable gardening. This enterprise has been started in their work by the distribution of seeds, and today there is a considerable piece of land near Ambridge which looks like a very prosperous market garden.

Contributions to hospitals, libraries, churches and other philanthropic purposes appear in the budget. It is surprising how many companies report items for furnishing groceries and coal, and paying rent and insurance for employees who are ill or have been unfortunate—a work which goes on year after year, quietly, contentedly and without advertising.

"The social side of the life of the employee is often very greatly aided too by the local plant manager, who becomes a patron of picnics and athletic and a general aid to all the social movements of the community in which the plant is situated. A number of companies are aiding in the support of musical clubs and similar organizations among their workmen.

"Improvement in lighting and ventilation have been going on at a great many of the plants.

"Mr. Lynch has maintained very successfully in one of his districts a school for teaching his employees the number of the things necessary to advance them from the ranks of unskilled to skilled labor in the coal mines."

HAPPENINGS OF THE DAY IN THE BUSY MILL TOWN

Evening

TO ARRANGE BIBLE CONFERENCES

Large Crowd Turns Out to Hear the Band Concert and Automobile
Parties from Surrounding Places are Numerous—Farmers Worry.

Special to The Courier
SCOTTSDALE, June 12.—There has been called a meeting of the Committee on Bible Schools at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, Reid building, at 6:45 this evening to make arrangements for the coming of Rev. H. H. Pike of the Practical Bible Training School next week. Mr. Pike is to spend a week in this section and arrangements are to be made for the time he is to be in Scottsdale.

HOME FROM COLLEGE.
George Gustafson, of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Gustafson, of the church, arrived home from Toledo, Iowa, last evening. He has spent the last two years at that place as a student in Leander College and will be in the Junior class this year. The young man graduated from the Scottsdale High School and went to Toledo, where he is living with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Owen.

LARGE CROWD OUT.
There was a large crowd out last evening attending the Grand Army band concert, which was an event of the week at Leander park. These free concerts are very attractive and draw from us as far as Greensburg and Uniontown. Motor parties frequently make it an object to be in Scottsdale at the time of these concerts.

DRY WEATHER.
The dry weather of the last several days has caused some uneasiness among the farmers and gardeners of this section, who fear that there will be a repetition of the conditions of some years ago. The crops and vegetables are showing the lack of rain perceptibly.

AT RICHVIEW.
Two motor parties went to Richview park on Sunday. Mr. A. Gordon took a party over, and Dr. F. W. McKee and family and Mr. and Mrs. Bert Laughlin were the occupants of Dr. McKee's automobile and made the pleasant trip.

SPRINKLERS IN.
There has been a fair amount of strawberries brought to town during this week, along with some cherries, but the prospects for the crop are not good, according to the growers, who assert that this week will clean up the crop. The lack of any showers of rain has prevented the growth of the berries.

Experience.

"In my 10 years' experience as a teacher and practitioner along hygiene lines," says a Los Angeles physician "I have never found a food to compare with Grape-Nuts for the benefit of the general health of all classes of people."

"I have recommended Grape-Nuts for a number of years to patients with the greatest success and every year's experience makes me more enthusiastic in recommending it."

"I make it a rule to always recommend Grape-Nuts, and Postum, in place of coffee, when giving my patients instructions as to diet for the brain in good working order."

"As for myself, when engaged in much mental work my diet twice a day consists of Grape-Nuts and rich cream. I find it not the thing to build up my nutrition and keep the brain in good working order."

"In addition to its wonderful effects as a brain and nerve food Grape-Nuts always keeps the digestive organs in perfect, in other words, I carry it with me when I travel, otherwise I am almost certain to have trouble with my stomach." Name given by mail by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Strong endorsements like the above from physicians all over the country have stamped Grape-Nuts the most scientific food in the world. "There's a reason."

"When my baby boy was six months old, his body was completely covered with large sores that seemed to itch and burn, and caused terrible suffering. ## CHAPTER XII.

Wherein Elinora Discovers a Violin and Billy Disciplines Margaret.

Elinora missed the little figure at the bridge the next morning. She slowly walked up the street and turned in at the wide entrance to the school grounds. She scarcely could comprehend that only a week ago she had some there, friendless, alone, and so sick at heart that she was physically ill. Today she had decent clothing, books, friends and her mind was at ease to work on her studies.

As she approached home that night the girl passed in amazement. Her mother had company, and she was laughing. Elinora entered the kitchen softly and peeped into the sitting room. Mrs. Comstock sat in her chair holding a book and every few seconds a soft chuckle broke into a real laugh. Mark Twain was doing his work, while Mrs. Comstock was not lacking in a sense of humor. Elinora entered the room before her mother saw her. Mrs. Comstock looked up with flushed face.

"Where did you get this?" she demanded.

"I bought it," said Elinora. "Hought it! With all the taxes due!" "I paid for it out of my Indian money," mother said Elinora. "I couldn't bear to spend so much on myself and nothing at all on you. I was afraid to buy the dress I should have liked to, and I thought the book would be company while I was gone. I haven't read it, but I do hope it's good."

"Good! It's the biggest piece of foolishness I have read in all my life. I've laughed all day ever since I found it. I had a notion to go out and read some of it to the cows and see if they wouldn't laugh."

"It made you laugh, it's a wise book," said Elinora.

"Wise!" cried Mrs. Comstock. "You can stake your life it's a wise book. It takes the smartest man there is to do this kind of fooling." And she began laughing again.

Elinora, highly satisfied with her purchase, went to her room and put on her working clothes. Thereafter she made a point of getting a book that she thought would interest her mother from the library every week and leaving it on the sitting room table. Every night she carried home at least two schoolbooks and studied until she had mastered the points of each lesson. She did her share of the work faithfully, and every available minute she was in the fields searching for cocoons, for the moths promised to become her best source of income.

She gathered large baskets of nuts, flowers, mosses, insects and all sorts of natural history specimens and sold them to the grade teachers. At first she tried to tell these instructors what to teach their pupils about the specimens, but, recognizing how much more she knew than they, one after another begged her to study at home and use her spare hours in school to exhibit and explain natural subjects to their pupils. Elinora loved the work, and she needed the money, for every few days some matter of expense arose that she had not expected.

When the music swelled from the school orchestra Elinora's heart almost broke with throbbing joy, for music almost had affected her strangely, and, since she had been comfortable enough in her surroundings to notice things, she had listened to every note to find what it was that literally hurt her heart, and at last she knew. It was the talking of the violins. They were human voices, and they spoke a language Elinora understood. It seemed to her that she must climb up on the steps, take the instruments from the fingers of the players and make them speak what was in her heart. She fairly prayed to get hold of one, if only for a second.

That night she said to her mother: "I am perfectly crazy for a violin. I am sure I could play one; sure as I live. Did any one?" Elinora never completed that sentence.

"Hush!" thundered Mrs. Comstock. "Be quiet. Never mention those things before the girls—never as long as you live. I loathe them. They are a source of the very devil himself. They were made to lure men and women from their homes and their honor. If ever I see you with one in your fingers I will smash it in pieces."

Naturally Elinora hushed, but she thought of nothing else after she had done justice to her lessons. At last there came a day when for some reason the leader of the orchestra left his violin on the grand piano. That morning Elinora made her first mistake in algebra. At noon, as soon as the great building was empty, she slipped into the auditorium, found the side door which led to the stage, and, going through the musicians' entrance, she took the violin. She carried it back into the little side room where the orchestra assembled, closed all the doors, opened the case and lifted out the instrument.

She laid it on her breast, dropped her chin on it and drew the bow softly across the strings. One after another she tested the open notes. They returned her of things. Gradually her stroke ceased to tremble and she drew the bow firmly. Then her fingers began to fall, and softly, slowly she searched up and down those strings for sounds she knew. Standing in the middle of the floor, she tried over and over. It seemed scarcely a minute before the hall was filled with the sound of hurrying feet, and she was forced to put away the violin and go to her classes. Of food she never thought until she noticed how heavy her lunch box was on the way home, so she sat on the log by the swamp and remedied that. The next day she prayed that the violin would be left again, but her petition was not answered.

That night when she returned from the school she made an excuse to go down to see Billy. He was engaged in pulling walnuts by driving them through holes in a board. His hands were protected by a pair of Margaret's old gloves, but he had speckled his face generously. He looked well and greeted Elinora blandly.

"Are the squirrels are laying up our winter stores?" he shouted. "Cos the cold is coming, and the snow, and if we have any nuts we have to fix 'em now. But I'm ahead, 'cos Uncle Wesley made me this board, and I can pull a big pile while the old squirrel does only one with his teeth."

Elinora picked him up and kissed him. "Billy, are you happy?" she asked.

"Yes, and so's Snap," answered Billy. "You ought to see him make the dirt fly when he gets after a chipmunk."

He smiled Wesley and ran to show him a walnut too big to go through the hole, and Elinora and Margaret went into the house.

They talked of many things for a time, and then Elinora said suddenly, "Aunt Margaret, I like music."

"I've noticed that in you all your life," answered Margaret.

"I can make a violin talk," announced Elinora, and then in amazement watched the face of Margaret Sinton grow pale.

"A violin!" she whispered. "Where did you get a violin?"

"They fairly seemed to speak to me in the orchestra. One day the conductor left his in the auditorium, and I took it, and Aunt Margaret I can make it do the wind in the swamp, the birds and the animals. I can make any sound I ever heard on it. If I had a chance to practice a little I could make it do the orchestra music too. I don't know how I know, but I do."

"Did you ever mention it to your mother?" faltered Margaret.

"Yes, and she seems prejudiced against them; but, oh, Aunt Margaret, I never felt so about anything, not even going to school. I just feel as if I'd die if I didn't have one. I could keep it at school and practice at noon a whole hour. Soon they'd ask me to play in the orchestra. I could keep it in the case and practice in the woods in autumn. You'd let me play here over Sunday. Oh, Aunt Margaret, what does one cost? Would it be wicked for me to take of my own money and buy a very cheap one? I could play on the least expensive one made."

"Oh, no, you couldn't. A cheap machine makes cheap music. You got to have a fine fiddle to make it sing. But there's no sense in your buying one. There isn't a decent reason on earth why you shouldn't have your

"My father's!" cried Elinora. She caught Margaret Sinton by the arm. "My father had a violin. He played it! That's what I want! Where is it? Is it in our house? Is it in mother's room?"

"Elinora!" panted Margaret. "Your mother will kill me! She always hated it!"

"Mother dearly loves music," said Elinora.

"Not when it took the man she loved away from her to make it," said Elinora.

"Where is my father's violin?"

"I've never seen a picture of my father. I've never had a scrap that belonged to him. Was he my father or am I a charity child like Billy, and so she hates me?"

"She's got good pictures of him. Seems she just can't bear to hear him talked about. Of course, he was your father. They lived right there when you were born. She don't dislike you. She just tries to make herself think she does. There's no sense in the world in not having his violin. I've a great notion!"

"Has she got it?"

"No. I've never heard her mention it. It was not at home when he—when he died."

"Do you know where it is?"

"Yes. I'm the only person on earth who does, except the one who has it."

"Who is that?"

"I can't tell you, but I will see if they have it yet and get it if I can."

"I told you, I went to see the lawyer."

that almost choked him.

"Now you can eat it," shouted Billy in delight. "It's all dark. I can't see what you're doing!"

Wesley picked up the small figure and set the boy on the back of a horse to bring his face level so that they could talk as men.

"Now, what a dandy scheme!" he commented. "Did you and Aunt Margaret fix it up?"

"No. She can't had hers yet. But I got one for her. Let us soon as you can get me to take her and feed her first time I find her in the dark."

"But, Billy, where did you get the cookies? You know" Aunt Margaret said you were not to have any."

"I got them from me. I got them from you and her. Did—did—did I steal?"

Wesley's big hands closed until he almost hurt the boy.

"No!" he said vehemently. "That's too big a word. You just made a mistake. If you had told Aunt Margaret what you wanted to do and asked her for the cookies she would have given them to you."

"Must I take it back?"

"You think hard, and decide yourself," suggested Wesley.

"Lift me down," said Billy, after a silence. "I got to put this in the jar and tell her."

Wesley set the boy on the floor, but as he did so he paused one second and strained him close to his breast.

Margaret sat in her chair sewing. Billy slipped in and crept up beside her. The little face was lined with tragedy.

"Why, Billy, whatever is the matter?" she cried as she dropped her sewing and held out her arms. Billy stood back. He gripped his little fists tight and squared his shoulders. "I got to shut up in the closet," he said.

"Oh, Billy! What an unlucky day! What have you done now?"

"I stole," gulped Billy. "He said it was just a mistake, but it was worse than that. I took something you told me I wasn't to have."

"Stole!" Margaret was in despair. "What, Billy?"

"Cookies," answered Billy in equal trouble. "And he told her, 'So I got to go in the closet.'"

Margaret gazed at him helplessly. "Will you hold me tight a little bit first?" he said.

Margaret opened her arms and Billy rushed in and clung to her a few seconds with all the force of his being, then he slipped to the floor and marched to the closet. Margaret opened the door. Billy gave one glance at the light, clutched his fists and, walking inside, climbed on a box. Margaret shut her eyes and closed the door.

Then she sat and listened. Was the air pure enough? Possibly he might smother. She had read something. She could bear it no longer. She arose hurriedly and opened the door. Billy was drawn up on the box in a little heap, and he lifted a disapproving face to her.

"What that door?" he said. "I ain't seen in here near long enough yet!"

CHAPTER XIII.

Wherein Elinora Has More Financial Troubles, and Her Mother Again Refuses to Help Her.

THE next night Elinora hurried to Sinton's. She threw open the back door and searched Margaret's face with anxious eyes.

"You got it?" panted Elinora. "You got it? I can see by your face that you did. Oh, give it to me!"

"Yes, I got it, honey—I got it all right, but don't be so fast. You can't have it before Saturday. It had been kept to such a damp place it needed drying. It had to have strings, and a key was gone. I knew how much you wanted it, so I sent Wesley right to town with it. They said they could fix it good as new, but it should be varnished and that it would take several days for the glue to set. You can have it Saturday."

"Saturday morning?"

"He just said Saturday. But, Elinora, you've got to promise me that you will leave it here, or in town, and not let your mother get a hint of it. I don't know what she'd do."

Uncle Wesley can bring it here until Monday. Then I will take it to school so that I can practice at noon. Oh, I don't know how to thank you. Elinora lived by minute until Saturday when, contrary to her usual custom, Sinton went to town in the forenoon, taking her along to buy some groceries. Sinton drove straight to the music store and asked for the violin he had left to be mended.

In its new coat of varnish, with new keys and strings, it looked greatly like any other violin to Sinton, but to Elinora it was the most beautiful instrument ever made and a priceless treasure. She held it in her arms, touched the strings softly and then she drew the bow across them in whispering measure. She had no time to think what a remarkably good bow it was for sixteen years' disuse. The ten leather case might have impressed her as being in fine condition also had she been in a state to question anything. She did remember to ask for the bill and she was gravely presented with a slip calling for four strings, one key and a coat of varnish, total $1.50.

As soon as her work was done she ran down to Sinton's and began to play, and on Monday the violin went to school with her. She made arrangements with the superintendent to leave it in his office and scarcely took time to practice. Her skill was so great that the leader of the orchestra offered to give her lessons if she would play to pay for them, so her progress was rapid in technical work. But from the first day the instrument became hers, with perfect faith that she could play as her father did, she spent half her practice time in imitating the sounds of all ensembles and improvising the songs her happy heart sang.

So the first year went, and the second and third were a repetition; but the fourth was different, for that was the close of the course, ending with graduation and all its attendant ceremonies and expenses. To Elinora these appeared mountain high. She had boarded every cent, thinking twice before she parted with a penny, but teaching natural history in the grades had taken time from her studies in school which must be made up outside. She was a conscientious student, ranking first in most of her classes and standing high in all the branches. Her interest in her violin had grown with the years.

Three years had changed Elinora from the girl of sixteen to the very verge of womanhood. She had grown tall, round and her face had the loveliness of perfect complexion, beautiful eyes and hair and an added touch from within that might have been called comprehensiveness.

She was so absorbed in her classes and her music that she had not been able to gather specimens as usual. When she realized this and hunted assiduously, she soon found that changing natural conditions had affected such work and specimens were scarce.

All the time the expense of books, clothing and incidentals had continued. Elinora added to her bank account whenever she could and drew out when she was compelled, but she omitted the important feature of calling for a balance. So one early spring morning in the last quarter of the fourth year she almost fainted when she learned that all her funds were gone. Commencement, with its extra expense, was coming. She had no money and very few cocoons to open in June, which would be too late. She had one collection for the Bird Woman complete to a pair of Imperialis moths, and that was her only asset. On the day she added these big yellow Emperors she would get a check for $300, but she would not get it until those specimens were secured. She remembered that she never had found an Emperor before June.

Moreover, that sum was for her first year in college. Then she would be of age, and she meant to sell enough of her share of her father's land to finish. She knew her mother would oppose her bitterly in that, for Mrs. Comstock had clung to every acre and tree that belonged to her husband. Her land was almost complete forest where her neighbors owned cleared farms dotted with wells that every hour sucked oil from beneath her holdings, but she was too absorbed in the grief she nursed to know or care. The taxes for the Brushwood road and the redredging of the great Limberlost ditch had been more than she could pay from her income, and she had trembled before the wicket as she asked the banker if she had funds to pay it and wondered why he laughed at her. She had asked her mother, but Mrs. Comstock had spent no time on compounding interest and never added the sums she had been depositing through nearly twenty years. Now she thought her funds were almost gone, and every day she worried over expenses. She could see no reason in going through the forms of graduation when pupils had all in their heads that was required to graduate. Elinora knew she had to have her diploma in order to enter the college she wanted to attend, but she did not dare utter the word until high school was finished, for, instead of softening, as she hoped her mother had begun to do, she seemed to remain very much the same.

When the girl reached the swamp she sat on a log and thought bitterly over the absolute expense she was compelled to meet. Every member of her particular set was having an expensive photograph taken to exchange with the others. Elinora loved these girls and boys, and to say she could not have their pictures to keep was more than she could bear! Each one would give to all the others a handsome graduation present. She knew they would prepare gifts for her whether she could make a present in return or not. Then it was the custom for each graduating class to give a great entertainment and use the funds to present the school with a statue for the entrance hall. Elinora had been cast for and was practicing a part in that performance. She was expected to furnish her dress and personal necessities. She had been told that she must have a green dress. And where was it to come from?

Every girl of the class would have three beautiful new frocks for commencement—one for the baccalaureate sermon, another, which could be plain, for graduation exercises, and a handsome one for the banquet and ball. Elinora faced the past two years and wondered how she could have spent so much money and not kept account of it. She did not realize where it had gone. She did not know what she could do now. She thought over the photographs and at last settled that question to her satisfaction. She studied longer over the gifts, ten handsome ones there must be, and at last decided she could arrange for them. The green dress came first. The lights would be dim in the scene and the setting deep woods. She could manage that. She simply could not have three dresses. She would have to get a very simple one for the sermon and the best she could for graduation. Whatever she got for that must be made with a glimpse that could be taken out to make it a little more festive for the ball. But where could she get even two pretty dresses?

The only hope she could see was to break into her collection, sell some moths and try to replace them in June. But she knew that never would do. No June ever brought just the things she hoped. If she spent the college money she knew she could not replace it. If she did not the only way was to try for a room in the grades and teach a year. Her work there had been so appreciated that Elinora felt with the recommendation she knew she could get from the superintendent and teachers she could secure a position.

She wanted to start to college when the other girls were going. If she could make the first year alone she could manage the rest. But she must first rearrange her must. Instead of selling all of her collection, she must hunt as she never before had hunted and find a yellow Emperor. She had to have it, that was all. Also, she had to have those dresses. She thought of Sinton and dismissed it. She thought of the Bird Woman and knew she could not tell her. She thought of every way in which she ever had hoped to earn money and realized that with the play, committee meetings, practicing and final examinations she scarcely had time to live, much less to do more work than the work required for her pictures and gifts. Again Elinora was in trouble, and this time it seemed the worst of all.

It was dark when she arose and went home.

"Mother," she said, "I have a piece of news that is decidedly not cheerful. My money is all gone."

"Well, did you think it would last forever? It's been a marvel to me that it's held out as well as it has, the way you've dressed and gone."

"I don't think I've spent any that I was not compelled to," said Elinora. "I've dressed on just as little as I possibly could to keep going. I am heart-sick. I thought I had over $50 to put me through commencement, but they tell me it's all gone."

"In my opinion you'd best bring some your books and quit right now," said Mrs. Comstock. "You can't be fixed like the rest of them. Don't be so foolish as to run into it. Just stay here and let these last few days go. You can learn enough more to be of any account."

"I can't!" said Elinora desperately. "I've gone on too long. It would make a break in everything. They wouldn't let me have my diploma!"

"What's the difference? You're got the stuff in your head. I wouldn't give a rap for a scrap of paper. That don't mean anything!"

"But I've worked four years for it and I can't enter—I ought to have it to help me get a school when I want to teach. If I don't have my grades to show people will think I quit because I couldn't pass my examinations. I must have my diploma!"

"Then get it!" said Mrs. Comstock.

ALWAYS TIRED, WITH LITTLE VITALITY

Modern Tonic, Tona Vita, Will Surely Build You Up Again.

Are you one of the run-down, half-sick nervous people with which the country is filled? Do you feel tired all the time with very little vitality? Do you sleep badly and feel as worn out in the morning as when you went to bed? Is your circulation poor and do you catch cold easily? Have you stomach trouble and an irregular appetite? Are you nervous, moody and depressed?

There are sure symptoms of nervous debility. If you are struggling along in this miserable condition the best thing you can possibly do for yourself is to take "Tona Vita," the wonderful new tonic that has the unqualified endorsement of more physicians than any other medicine ever before offered to the public.

Here is what the Rev. Gustave Frederick, pastor of the Evangelistic church, Center street, Milwaukee, Wis., has to say of it:

"Judging from my own experience I do not hesitate to say that 'Tona Vita' is an extremely valuable preparation. I have not only used it myself, but other members of my family have been taking it with highly satisfactory results."

So far as my own case is concerned I have been in a run-down condition for a year or so, tiring easily and being troubled with sleeplessness. I lacked vitality and caught cold readily, and my digestion and appetite were poor. I was depressed in mind and body and very nervous. I now feel no longer than for a long time. I have more energy and my work is done with much less effort. I sleep and eat better and feel as though rejuvenated."

"Tona Vita" acts quickly. You will be surprised how rapidly it will build you up. A. A. Clarke has the agency for Tona Vita in Connelville, Pa. It will return the purchase price if not entirely satisfactory. The approved Formula Co., Dayton, O.
